

Gizmo Expands in-Home Service Offer to Brisbane and Canberra

Sydney, NSW – 30 November, 2006 – Gizmo, the support service designed to help Australians get the most out of their computer and related gadgets, today announced that in-home services are now available in metropolitan areas in Brisbane and Canberra.

Residents of these two cities can now take advantage of specialist Gizmotechs visiting their homes to customise, set up and repair computers, home networks and peripherals such as printers, digital cameras, webcams and MP3 players.

Offering nationwide telephone support as well as comprehensive in-home services in Sydney, Melbourne and now Brisbane and Canberra, Gizmo allows Australians to get peak performance out of all their home technology purchases.

Gizmo's latest rollout is part of the Company's vision to offer a complete home service to all Australians nationwide, establishing it as the leading home technology support provider across Australia.

"Gizmo will continue to expand and provide personal and customised help to more Australians as they adopt new technology in their homes" said Brett Chenoweth, Gizmo's CEO. "Our launch in Brisbane and Canberra moves us closer to our vision of eliminating any frustration and complexity associated with everyday technology."

Gizmo allows people to select from a wide list of service packages designed specifically to address the diverse needs of home technology and digital devices. Home service visits are priced¹ at a flat rate and range from $120 to $240 depending on the service required while over the phone service is a flat $60 (support that requires less than ten minutes costs only $20). Additionally, Gizmo offers a 'no fix, no fee' guarantee².
